

A Method and Apparatus for Improving Throughput in a Wireless Local Area Network

5

Abstract of the Disclosure

10 A method and apparatus for improving throughput in a wireless local area (WLAN), which includes buffering a set of messages, identifying a target address for the set of messages, and concatenating the set of messages based on the target address.

The target address can be either unicast, broadcast, multicast or combination of unicast, broadcast and multicast as described herein.